This book is the gripping true story of David, raised between two worlds: the warmth of his family home and communism's absolute control. When he chose personal conviction over conformity, the Soviet military sent him to one of the harshest outposts of the empire - a prison camp deep in the Siberian taiga. There, guarding the broken and forgotten, David faced a system designed to erase individual identity and crush the soul. The punishment given to break him became the experience that shaped him.

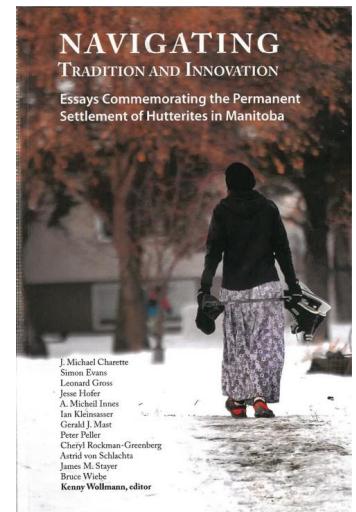

David's authentic narrative dares to ask timeless questions: What will it cost to stay true to my convictions? How do we find light in the coldest, darkest places of our lives? Can the voice of conscience still be heard through the static of war and political noise - even today?

Powerful and deeply personal, The Iron Broom by David Sawatzki is a story of faith, resilience, and redemption that outlasted an empire. $29.99

Navigating Tradition and Innovation commemorates the 100th anniversary of Hutterite settlement in Manitoba, Canada. This collection of nine essays explores the history, challenges, and evolving dynamics of Hutterite life with an emphasis on the Schmiedeleut in Manitoba. (edited by Kenny Wollmann) $36

'Navigating Tradition and Innovation casts considerable light on the experience of Hutterites in Manitoba over the past century...The essays by Hutterite writers offer the most unique contributions to a wider understanding of Hutterites.'
