Every Season Under Heaven

Harold Neufeld

Facing land shortages and religious conflict, Mennonites founded Fürstenland in South Russia. Sergejewka, established in 1868, grew from a farming village into an industrial town. Emigration and rising rents weakened it. After the 1917 Revolution, mayor Johann struggled between villagers and the new regime. Factory owners fled in 1918; famine and drought followed. By 1925, survival was impossible. Emigration to Canada became their only hope. The story opens on a Manitoba farm during a harsh winter.
